Update From Dr Henry on July 9

It is far too early to fully relax and return to normal as the virus continues to circulate in the community and around the world.

Until there is an effective treatment or vaccine for the disease, everyone should keep up with measures to prevent transmission – things like physical distancing and wearing masks when that isn't possible, washing hands often, being in open spaces, etc.

The province is working on identifying a reliable antibody test to determine how many people have been infected and recovered without ever testing positive for COVID-19.

Recent public exposure events have officials urging British Columbians to be careful about expanding their social circles.
